Kazimir Malevich (1879–1935) Portrait of a Woman, ca. 1910-1911 Gouache on cardboard State Museum of Contemporary Art Costakis Collection 140.78-46.Â Constructivist artists â€“ Varvara Stepanova, her husband Alexander Rodchenko, their friend Lyubov Popovaâ€“were keen on creating a new type of clothes, prozodezhda, which included all types of working and sports clothes. According to the approach of Soviet power, sport was to become an important part of life of new Soviet peopleâ€“a sort of leisure balancing work. This was a model of an ideal life in future. Female overalls and female sports suit were both created by Varvara Stepanova in 1924 and reconstructed in 1984 by a famous Soviet clothes designer Elena Khudyakova. Dream the impossible because dreams do come true. I am not a star, a star is nothing but a ball of gas. Going against the grain of society is the greatest thing in the world. Read More. share:

Myth-Making: Dreaming the Future. Myths of past and future. I have spent my life looking back. Not just back on a golden childhood, and a rarely mis-spent youth, I mean far back. That long ago of myth and legend, when the gods roamed the earth, and heroes still recognized the monsters they faced. While I was young enough to let my imagination run the show, I would spend hours a day in a very real world of make believe. I became the heroes of the stories I read, acting out my fears and passions through the characters I came across. Here, suddenly, was a future I could imagine. Cold, dark, with sprawling galaxies and plot twists, an aging Empire and something mysterious coming. Very mythological indeed. But it was to be only a fleeting glance of the future.

What Past Events in Dreams Mean. A common theme for many who dream relates to past or present events. It's hard to know what these dreams truly mean however, psychologist like Carl Jung suggest you may be trying to work out some type of inter-psychic conflict. Dreams about your parents (living or dead) could suggest unfinished business. At their core, dreams can foreshadow something that might happen in the future. This isn't the same as a dream being prophetic. If you have a general form of anxiety, you may dream about something you are worried about down the road that has a high probability of becoming true. Do you have a history of trusting your partners? Do you have problems with trusting yourself? Do you fear you will relapse from an addiction?
